Excerpt

At the time of the 1955 flood, Peter Milling worked at his family's Stock and Station Agency in Macquarie Street. Peter vividly recalls dropping assistance packages to stranded farms from Max Hazelton's planes. He also discusses some of the interesting consequences of the flood for Dubbo's citizens.

Transcript Excerpt

(I): So after the water started to come up at Brisbane Street - that was quite an unusual occurrence I take it - the minor floods you mentioned before that had never happened?
